Philadelphia Military Academy Students Prepare To Be Next Generation of Leaders Inaugural Youth Motivation Day Seeks to Prepare Students for Assured Career Success

February 4, 2010—Philadelphia, PA. Philadelphia Military Academy at Leeds under the leadership of Principal William C. Wade will kickoff its first ever Youth Motivation Day on Wednesday, April 7, from 8:30 to 11:30 am. This unconventional career day will be aimed at preparing today's students for leadership roles in tomorrow's careers by pairing curriculums with future business needs. Students will not only be introduced to real life success stories but they will be partnered with national and local leaders in top, innovative professions. Invited speakers extend beyond lawyers and doctors but include policy makers, entrepreneurs, media moguls, and taste-makers who contribute to our community's and our nation's success.

Academic success and career preparedness go hand-in-hand and is an ever-evolving challenge the administration and staff at The Philadelphia Military Academy at Leeds welcome. "Our goal is that our students become successful leaders who make a positive impact in our communities, in businesses, and ultimately on the future success of our nation," says Principal Wade. PMA Leeds, one of few schools in the Philadelphia area to be awarded the Honor Unit with Distinction from The Fort Dix 2nd Brigade Headquarters, Army JROTC, provides students with the exposure, knowledge and tools necessary to ensure academic success that leads to valuable career choices.

Motivational Speakers Encouraged to Inspire

PMA Leeds encourages those who are passionate about their profession and who are eager to inspire high school students to come be a part of Youth Motivation Day on Wednesday, April 7, from 8:30 to 11:30 am. Individuals who have an engaging career plight or have made strides in their career are invited to be a part of the Academy's inaugural event. Motivators should expect to present for up to 30 minutes and can provide collateral, handouts or various hands-on displays that offer students a real-life idea of what a day-in-the-life of their position entails. Individuals interested in PMA's Youth Motivation Day should email Principal William Wade at wwade@philasd.org.
